Planters as Modern Artifacts

The collection of planters draws inspiration from the cross-currents of ancient civilizations that once flourished in the Mediterranean basin. Drawing from the cultural and artistic achievements of the Greco-Roman, Egyptian, Byzantine, and Persian civilizations, the collection pays homage to the enduring allure of Antiquity.

Each planter encapsulates a distilled essence of historical reference, abstracting classical shapes into minimalist forms. This subtle yet deliberate fusion of historical motifs with contemporary simplicity serves to create a dialogue between past and present while adapting to modern design sensibilities.

Much like the vessels that held artistic treasures in ancient times, these works assume the role of cradling and presenting living sculptures - plants. Their purpose transcends functional containment; they become modern-day artifacts elevating the plant to covetable status and displaying them as a collectible object.

In essence, the collection reflects the deep reverence that ancient civilizations held for nature, acknowledging its profound influence on artistic creation, and the Deities thought to preside over the drama of the natural world. Beyond serving as mere vessels, they invite a continuation of our own dialogue with nature and a tangible link to the timeless inspiration it provides.

SATURN

Series 1, Modular

Paying homage to the vessels that once adorned temple altars in ancient times, the SATURN footed bowl draws inspiration from the Roman god of the same name and his overflowing chalice, symbolizing an abundance of plant life. The silhouette establishes a connection with contemporary architecture, while the versatile stem allows it to be arranged in vignettes of various heights. In this design, we discover a blend of levity and the importance of reverence found in ancient cultures.

ATLAS

Series 1, Modular

The ATLAS planter, with its monolithic form, channels the spirit of ancient building techniques, evoking the solidity of interlocking foundational blocks that have kept the ancient temples standing throughout the ages. Executed with precision on a strictly horizontal and vertical plane, bands of chiseled stone create a Brutalist corduroy, echoing a relevant urban language. The corduroy, whether produced vertically or horizontally, adds both line and rhythm to the piece, establishing a seamless connection between the planter and its surroundings.

ORION

Series 1, Modular

A pure cylindrical column culminates in a half sphere, distilling ORION into a minimalist form—simple yet versatile. Belts of hammered stone pay homage to the celestial body of Greek legend, creating a connection with the mythic past. Additional segments slot into the previous, allowing the planter to change height and accommodate a variety of plant sizes.

JANUS

Series 1, Modular

JANUS, the epitome of duality within our collection, is named after the Roman god of transitions. This planter seamlessly embodies the concept of two-faced duality. JANUS can be configured as a low-profile accent, elegantly hugging the ground, or it can stretch to impressive heights, accommodating full-sized trees. The chiseled texture can be placed both vertically and horizontally, accentuating its dual nature and offering maximum versatility.

APOLLO

Series 1, Modular

With its minimalist column design, Apollo takes inspiration from the finely finished stonework seen in Greek temples constructed in his honor. Rising with a tall and slender silhouette, it is tailored for spaces that benefit from a strong vertical element while maintaining a small footprint, representing the delicate balance of strength and lightness attributed to Apollo, God of Light.

ICARUS

Series 2, Single-Cast

The ICARUS group pays homage to the artistic ambitions of the Greeks and their profound reverence for sculptural works. Stripped down to an abstract representation of the famous mythological figure, this collection signifies a new chapter in the series. Moreover, each of the three pieces can be intricately puzzled together in endless combinations, resulting in a larger sculpture. Beyond being individual planters, the ICARUS group becomes a dynamic and customizable art installation, inviting endless possibilities in both form and function.

Finish Palette & Details

Each planter is made by hand in California from cast concrete. Our proprietary mix design regularly tests at approximately 7500 PSI.

The concrete was formulated to have a smooth, dry hand akin to unglazed porcelain.

They are suitable for both interior and exterior settings and are triple water-proofed on the inside and finished with a matte sealer on the outside.

All planters can be produced with or without drainage ports.

Custom colors are available upon request. Please inquire.
